We remove the Torah scroll from the ark and the leader faces the congregation. The following two lines are recited by the leader and we then repeat them:

Leader, facing the ark:

בִּכְלָל לִי הָעָם, נְפֹרְפֶּם שָׁם יִוֶּה.

The Torah is carried in a circuit around the congregation.

The Torah is placed on the reading table.

אַבּ לַהֲרֹמִימ, הָבָה יָרָה עַםָּמִיס, נְזָרָה בָּרֹיתָי, הָטַּלְּקָה הַיֲשָׁרָאָי.

The Torah binder touches the scroll at the starting place (indicated by the reader) and then kisses the tallit or binder, reciting the b'rakhah while holding the wooden handles of the Torah rollers. When the reading is completed, this gesture is repeated.

Congregation and Leader:

אַמְּתַּמָּה נְדַבְּרוּ שָׁם הָאָלָהָים, חֲיָם קָלְּבֵם חִיוָּם.

acclaim לְלַעֲבָה. Psalm 34:4. This verse, asking the congregation to acknowledge Adonai, and the following verses, which form the congregational response, mark the oldest section of the Torah service. Since Judaism avoids any iconic representations of God, the Torah represents the most concrete symbol of God’s presence on earth. When we bow in the direction of the Torah, we are acknowledging God’s presence among us. In this vein, the Torah procession concludes with verses that speak of bowing before God.

yours, Adonai נָרִי הָעָם. 1 Chronicles 29:11. These verses are presented as part of David’s last speech to the people Israel.

aliyot. A person called to the Torah is an oleh/olah la-torah, one who “goes up” to the Torah, since in the Middle Ages the reading table was on a raised platform. It is considered an honor to be called up to the Torah, to publicly recite the blessings over the reading. During the talmudic era, each person called to the Torah would chant the assigned passage directly from the scroll. Today, each person called to the Torah recites the b’rakhah and the Torah is chanted by a designated reader. (To this day, Yemenite Jews called to the Torah read their own aliyahs.) The ancient rabbis instituted a practice of calling a kohen for the first aliyah and a levi for the second, in order to mitigate arguments about who deserved the opening honors. Some congregations retain this practice; others call congregants to aliyot without regard to status. It has become customary that each person called to the Torah uses either the corner of the tallit or the Torah binder to touch the scroll at the starting place (indicated by the reader) and then kisses the tallit or binder, reciting the b’rakhah while holding the wooden handles of the Torah rollers. When the reading is completed, this gesture is repeated.

you who cling עַל הַרְבָּקִים. Deuteronomy 4:4. From Moses’ speech to Israel in the wilderness. In its context here, the verse is an assertion that it is through Torah that the fullness of life can be achieved.
